

I'm Not Willing to Send My Patients to Just Any Pharmacy

Specialty medications aren't like other drugs. They treat conditions like cancer, multiple sclerosis, and rheumatoid arthritis, can require special handling, and are often infused intravenously or injected. However, not all drugstores are equipped to safely dispense these medicines.

According to a national survey of physicians who prescribe these medications, only 5% believe that all drugstores "have the expertise and capability" to dispense specialty medications.

It's wrong for the state government to mandate contracts with drugstores that may not be qualified to dispense these complex specialty medicines.

VOTE NO on SB 2258 and SB 2301.
